The world famous “Genuine Antigua Quality” is grown on the slopes of the volcano Agua above 1,600 M.A.S.L. Small producers with a crop of around 50-100 bags represent the vast majority of the farms. Our Pastores Mill has a rich and long history. It started out as a flour mill in the early 1900’s and only became a coffee processing mill in the 1960’s. The entire coffee flow in the mill is made of wood - an exquisite exemplar of the carpenter’s craft. Preserving these traditional features and methods has meant that the mill maintains its charm and beauty as well as producing a consistent and distinctive quality of coffee.

After almost 60 years of processing coffee days in and days out, the mill underwent a full renovation process two years ago. While the mill worked with traditional equipment, they installed state-of-the-art machinery including separators and depulpers which use almost no water. The renovation of the processing units allowed the Pastores mill to reduce its water consumption by 90%.

The drying patios have been renewed with a new type of brick which better absorbs humidity. Unlike concrete patios, this brick does not damage the bean when the sun is too intense: through its humidity absorption principles, it remains relatively fresh while the beans dry. Sorting is done manually by a team of over 100 women - a slow but dedicated process that ensures no defects.
